A Day Behind the Wheel: Porsche perfection on Andalusia's finest roads

By Benjamin George

SOME days remind you why driving is a passion rather than simply a way of getting from A to B. Saturday, January 11, was one of those days.

I joined Porsche 911 Tours for their one-day Andalusian driving experience, meeting the group in Puerto Banus at 9.30am. From the outset, the variety of cars on display was impressive. The lineup featured 996, 993, 997 Targa and modern 992 models, all presented in astounding order.

The tour was hosted by a full team of experienced guides and a back-up mechanic, all of whom have lived in Spain for a lifetime and know these roads inside out. Their local knowledge and calm organisation ensured the day ran seamlessly.

We set off along the coastal road towards Manilva, with the Mediterranean beside us, before turning inland towards the white village of Casares. With fuel fully included, there was nothing to think about except enjoying the drive and the scenery.

Driving in convoy was a real highlight. Each generation of 911 had its own character, yet all shared that unmistakable Porsche DNA. Personally, I particularly enjoyed the 993, blending classic feel with confidence and balance. A coffee stop in Gaucin offered more than just refreshments. It quickly became a social hub, proving just how effective this experience is for networking and team building. The mountain road to Ronda delivered everything one could hope
